

Take a Stand Against Racism: July 14 2018

Far-right protesters are rallying around the imprisonment of the ex leader of the EDL Tommy Robinson to develop a new "racist street movement" with international support. A 15,000 strong demonstration in central London on June 9th under the guise of defending Tommy Robinson's free speech chanted islamophobic hate messages, made Nazi salutes, stormed and took over a tourist bus, violently assaulted police and tried to break the gates of Downing Street.

Labour Party shadow ministers and trade union and community leaders roundly and publicly condemned these actions in an open letter to The Guardian:

A dangerous racist street movement is now emerging - which can mobilise on a scale unknown for decades.

There is a new coalition of the extreme right - pulling together elements of UKIP, the English Defence League, its former leader Tommy Robinson, the Football Lads Alliance and Britain First. It draws its strength from the islamophobia, xenophobia and racism promoted by the likes of the Sun and Daily Mail and legitimised by politicians.

Brexit encouraged a wave of xenophobia and a big rise in racist and anti-semitic attacks.

The fact that extreme right regimes are in government in Italy, Austria, Hungary,

Poland and in superpower USA emboldens the extreme right here. There is now an international extreme right network of support.

And let us not forget that... Thomas Mair, murderer of MP Jo Cox in 2016, supported Britain First (the outfit which Trump praised on twitter) and Darren Osborne, who in 2017 murdered Akram Ali and injured nine others outside Finsbury Park Mosque, was radicalised by Tommy Robinson and the extreme right on social media.
